Hello, and Happy National Nursing Week!

National Nursing Week is an important time of year as we get to celebrate the nursing profession for its valuable role in our health care system and recognize the many achievements and contributions of nurses from across the province and throughout history.

This year's theme is 'Our Nurses, Our Future,' and in my role as Director of Membership Services at NNPBC, I can say that this theme truly resonates with me. Each day I have the opportunity to speak directly with nurses around BC who work in a variety of different roles across health care settings; nursing educators, administrators, and preceptors who are training the next generation of nurses; as well as nursing students and recent graduates entering their first years of practice. In my experience, even though the nursing profession is so varied and broad, nurses share the common purpose of bettering health care for the future. I am inspired by this theme and honoured to work with each of you.

From NNPBC Membership Services, thank you for all that you do and have a happy National Nursing Week.
